

The Forsyth Institute Center for Clinical and Translational Research

245 First St. Cambridge, MA 02142 (Entrance at 1 Athenaeum St.)

Dental Research Study Seeking Volunteers

- Do you feel pain or discomfort after a bite of ice cream or a spoonful of hot soup?
- Do you have teeth with cavities?

If you answered Yes to sensitivity and No to cavities, you may have “dentin hypersensitivity (tooth sensitivity)”

We are inviting volunteers (18-80 years of age) with dentin hypersensitivity to participate in a 14-day dental study to test a new (investigational) product in relieving pain and discomfort.

The study requires a screening visit to determine if you qualify. What will happen at the study screening visit? We will:

- Review your medical and dental history
- Examine your teeth, gums, and mouth
- Test your teeth that are sensitive to determine the level of sensitivity to cold

Once you qualify and agree to participate in the study, you will either:

- Receive a regular toothpaste and a new toothbrush to brush your teeth for a week
- Receive study toothpaste and a new toothbrush and instructions to follow

There will be a total of 3 study visits after the screening visit.

A total of $400 will be given as payment if you complete the study.

If you are interested, please call or email for more information:

617-892-8600
or 617-892-8499

clinicaltrialsinfo@forsyth.org or hhasturk@forsyth.org